Bruised Bulls face 20-hour flight to Champions quarterfinals

MAHLATSE MPHAALELE

The Bulls have complex travel logistics to negotiate to get to their Champions Cup quarter-final showdown against Northampton at Franklin's Gardens on Saturday night.

Speaking at Loftus before his team's departure for the UK, Bulls coach Jake White said the players would leave on Tuesday night on eight different airlines on an arduous journey that would take more than 20 hours.

"I have said it before that it's not ideal when you talk about high-performance sport and being able to be competitive," the former Springbok coach said as the Bulls held their final training session at a rainy Loftus in Pretoria on Tuesday.

"There are not too many sporting teams that will leave on eight different airlines on a Tuesday evening to [get to] a Saturday night game.

"For whatever reason and I am sure the powers that be will sort it out, but it isn't what was expected.

"We were told it was going to be an overnight flight, that is why we are playing in Europe.

"Two weeks ago we went to Leinster and it took us 28 hours to get there and 27 hours to get back, and whether we like it or not it comes at a cost. Whether we fly business class [or not].

"I am fortunate the board pays business class for our starting team, which is a fantastic gesture.

"It is a huge bonus [for the starting XV] but no sporting team flies 28 hours and with eight different aeroplanes, some to Birmingham or London where they are going to land at different times."

White said his squad would depart with players who were not fully recovered after a bruising round of 16 win over Lyon at Loftus on Saturday.

"In an ideal world I would have liked to have left on Wednesday night and landed on Thursday.

"When you leave on Tuesday, guys are sore after a really tough game against Lyon.

"Leaving on Tuesday gives you limited time because on Monday the players were sore, on Tuesday you are trying to complete as much preparations as you can and you are going to get there on Thursday.

"You can't have two teams training against each other because you don't have enough players to tour.

"All those factors are important and I want to remind you that Leinster came here last year and sent a team that we beat by 60 points.

"Even then, they had to juggle [due to travel logistics].

"We only manage what is given to us as best we can and what has been given to us is a short week.

"On Tuesday we fly out, Thursday is limited training time because of limited numbers.

"We arrive on Thursday and hopefully by lunchtime everyone should be in the hotel and we have to be ready for a training session that afternoon.

"The difficulty is coming back because everyone has to go back via different journeys around the world.

"Some come back via Doha, Dubai, Frankfurt. It is not ideal but we will get there."
